Introduction Of Letter Patterns From Part Two Of The Sound Story

Introduce these patterns after students have studied all of the short vowel words. Study a maximum of one new pattern each day. For each new pattern, students listen to a new section from the sound story, trace large letters for the pattern, and see pictures and words with the new pattern. The teacher reads the words to the students (students are not expected to read them). Students find the new pattern in each word and circle it. This is an initial introduction of these sounds, similar to the way beginning letters sounds are taught in the Learning The Alphabet books. Students will learn to read and spell words with these patterns when they begin Level 4 - Phonics Patterns. If you want to let students read words with these patterns before beginning Level 4, see the word lists in Color-Coded Short Vowel Lists and Basic Short Vowels. The words on these lists are specially chosen so that they will be easily decodable. (Words with long ā, ī, and ū, are not decodable at this level.)

Sound Story Part 2

Beyond The Alphabet Sounds

A few weeks later, Audrey and Brad and mom and dad heard about a great new movie about a boy and his dog. So, they decided to go to the theater. At the theater, someone in front of them started talking on a cell phone. "Shhh," Mom said, leaning forward in her seat. (sh(ship)

Students are not expected to read the words. The teacher reads each word, and the students repeat it.

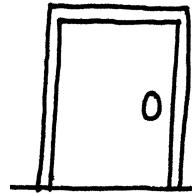

Tell the students that this consonant sound is shown with two letters instead of just one. In this pattern, the s and the h do not represent their regular sounds. They work together to show one completely new sound. Read each word to the students. The students say the word, say the beginning /sh/ sound, and circle it.

The movie was action packed and very exciting. Before they knew it, the movie was over. They were the last people to leave the theater. As they walked along the rows, they heard a squeaking sound, "eee, eee, eee." It was a tiny mouse scurrying along the floor under the seats. He was collecting dropped pieces of popcorn. (ē/begin)

A Snowy Day

The next morning Audrey and Brad didn't go to school, because it was Saturday. It was cold in the house. Mom got up while it was still dark to boil water for some hot tea. A soft "ttthhhh" sound could be heard as the steam escaped from the tea kettle. (th/thumb)

- Ending syllable sure as in measure
- Ending syllable sion as in vision
- Ending syllable sual as in unusual

- The z in azure

Students will study these patterns in Advanced Phonics Patterns From Children's Books. For now, students only learn the sound picture and the sound.

Students are not expected to read the words. The teacher reads each word, and the students repeat it.

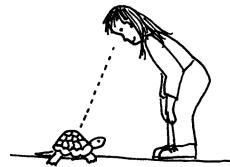

This sound does not have a standard letter pattern. It can be heard in words with several types of advanced ending syllables and also a few words that end with a _ge pattern. Words with this sound will be taught in the advanced phonics patterns book. Read each word to the students. Students listen for the hairdryer sound as they pronounce the word.

How To Use This Book

1. Each page in this workbook may be done after you have introduced the same set of words or sentences in the Rhyming Short Vowel Words And Sentences book using direct, step-by-step instruction from a teacher, parent, or tutor.
2. This workbook may also be used with the Basic Short Vowels book, which introduces short vowel words in the same sequence, but in a different format.
3. Students will study one short vowel at a time. As far as possible, the words are sorted into rhyming lists.
4. There are two different options for beginning the Rhyming Short Vowel Words And Sentences book and workbook.

Option 1

Teach students to recognize, give the sound, and write all of the letters of the alphabet first, using Learning The Alphabet, Books 1 And 2. As students work through the two books, it is not necessary for them to master the material right away. They will gradually learn to remember the letters and their sounds. Students will have time to practice and review as they develop an understanding of the alphabet. After completing the Learning The Alphabet books, begin the Rhyming Short Vowel Words And Sentences book and workbook.

Option 2

Use this option IF students are able to recognize the letters that have been taught, give their sounds, and write them on lined paper. If students are not ready, WAIT until they can recognize, give the sounds, and write the letters needed for each word list.

- Teach the letters t, i, h, l, n, w, u, b, m, and r. Then study the first list of short u words.
  - Teach f, x, e, and s. Then study the second list of short u words.
  - Teach j, o, c, and d, and then study the third short u list.
  - Teach a, v, g, and then study the fourth short u list.
  - Teach p, k, y, and then study the fifth short u list.
  - Teach qu, z, and then study the first short a list.
5. Each day, have students say the sounds from the alphabet chart in the Rhyming Short Vowel Words And Sentences book. Also use alphabet cards to review the letter sounds daily. Be sure students say the sound for each letter, not the letter name.

6. Many of the words in this workbook will be new to students. Be sure to explain the meanings of any unknown words. Many less common words are included so students can practice reading and writing words with a variety of beginning sounds and ending sounds combined with short vowel sounds. At the same time students are broadening their vocabulary. Young students are in a phase in which they are learning new words rapidly, and they will enjoy the new words. Just make sure you help them as often as necessary if they forget any of the words, so that they feel confident of your support. Including less common words also makes the materials appropriate for older students who need instruction at the short vowel level.
7. Reading words is not just a mental task. It is also a physical task. It involves coordinating thought processes (knowing which direction to go, recognizing each letter, and remembering the sound it represents) with physical movement (moving your eyes to scan the word from left to right without skipping letters or jumping around, pronouncing each sound using movements of your jaw, facial muscles, vocal cords, and lungs, putting the sounds together smoothly without a break). What a lot of things are happening all at once! Eye control, breath control, and movements of the mouth and tongue all must be coordinated with the mental effort needed to look at each letter, recognize it, and remember its sound. Reading many words for each short vowel provides the practice needed to master these skills.
8. Some pictures in this program are used more than once to represent several different words. Tell students not to expect a picture to always match the same word. For example, a picture of a cheerleader could be used to represent pep, vim, or pompom. In a similar way, the pictures of faces may be used with a variety of names.
9. Make flashcards for these sight words: a, A, as, has, was, is, his, I. Sight words are taught one or two at a time when students begin reading sentences. Use the cards to introduce and review the words when they appear on the sentence pages. Have students practice reading and spelling the words.
10. When you get to a new set of sentences, you may want to write some of them on blank pocket chart strips. Make two strips for each sentence, and cut the second strip apart to make separate word cards. Place the complete sentences into the chart, skipping a line after each strip. Have students sit on the floor in front of the chart. Then pass out the word cards to the students. Read each sentence, pointing to the words, and have students repeat it. Then point to each word in the sentence and ask who has that card. Students come up one at a time, placing their card just below the matching card in the sentence.

11. Using just the word cards from the above activity, place the words needed for each sentence in a row in the pocket chart, but mix up the order within each sentence. Then call on students to come forward and rearrange the words so that they make sense.
12. Place the word cards for each sentence in the pocket chart in the correct order. While the students close their eyes, turn over one card in each sentence so the students can't see it. Then have students read the sentence and predict the missing word. Turn over the card to see if the students were correct.
13. Integrate spelling with reading. Dictate letter sounds to practice handwriting. Dictate the short vowel words from each list to practice spelling. Students listen carefully and say each sound, one at a time, as they write the related letters.
14. As they work through this book, congratulate students on taking a big step towards becoming independent readers and writers.

Learning To Connect Consonants And Vowels - The Key To Success

One of the important goals for students at this level is learning to put letter sounds together smoothly, so that the result sounds like a real word. Before they can do this with three-sound words (fan, top, miss), many students need to practice pronouncing two-letter vowel-consonant combinations (ab, ac, ad, af). The Rhyming Short Vowel Words And Sentences book has sound blending exercises throughout the book. You can use the moveable Letter Connections chart for the same type of practice. Another way to practice two-letter combinations is to play the Raspberry Game and Blueberry Game with small groups. Many students need to practice this skill daily over a period of time in order to master it.

After students can successfully pronounce vowel-consonant combinations and consonant-vowel combinations, they will be ready to begin reading short vowel words. Reading groups of rhyming words is a good way to start. As students move from one rhyming word to the next, they only have to focus on changing the first consonant sound, because the ending vowel-consonant combination stays the same. Students will be able to add the beginning sounds more easily, which boosts student confidence. They will also be excited to be able to pronounce and recognize meaningful words.

Students who have learned to read rhyming short vowel words need an extra step to cement their learning. They need to read "body-coda" word lists, which have the same beginning sounds (a consonant followed by a vowel, as in bat, ban, bad, bass) and different ending sounds. This time, the beginning sound connections remain the same and students only have to change the ending sounds. If you don't go on to this step, students will expect rhyming words all of the time and may ignore the ending consonants, mispronouncing words. Reading body-coda lists helps to solve this problem.

This two-step structured approach (rhyming followed by body-coda) makes the process of decoding much easier for students. They are able to internalize the phonetic nature of words without the need for a lot of explanation.

To put this plan into action, after students have studied all of the short vowel words for a particular vowel in the Rhyming Short Vowel Words And Sentences book, have them read the same short vowel section in the Color-Coded Short Vowel Lists book. You could also use the Short Vowel Lists In All Black Print book. Both of these books have rhyming lists followed by body-coda lists. The words are not illustrated. This teaches students to rely only on the letters when they are reading words.

Rhyming and body-coda lists are also included in the Basic Short Vowels book, which is printed in all black print. It has illustrated word lists and sentences.

Continuous And Stopped Consonants

It is helpful at this stage to be aware of the two main types of consonants. Continuous consonants are those that can be held for a period of time, such as ssssss, ffffff, and mmmmmm. Stopped consonants, such as t, c, and p, cannot be held. The sounds disappear right after they are pronounced. It is easier for beginning readers to read words that start with continuous consonants, since the sounds can be held long enough to easily connect with the vowel that follows. In the word man, the reader can pronounce the letter sounds mmmaaannn without a break between the sounds. In the word c...aaannn, however, the sound of the beginning letter c cannot be held, so it is harder to connect it to the vowel sound. This is why learning to pronounce just two sounds at a time is helpful for students before they attempt to read three-sound short vowel words.

How To Play The "Robot Game" With The First Workbook Page

In Rhyming Short Vowel Words And Sentences, the pictures and words are set up to do a phonemic awareness exercise called the "Robot Game."

This game is beneficial for beginning students and older students who are learning or reviewing the phonics patterns. It helps students develop both decoding and spelling skills.

The Basic Short Vowels book is in a different format, but it follows the same short vowel sequence. So the picture-word pages from the Rhyming Short Vowel Words And Sentences book can be used with it if desired.

If you do not have access to the Rhyming Short Vowel Words And Sentences book, you can teach each new set of words by playing the Robot Game with the students using the pages in this workbook. Use the page with a column of words down the center with pictures on each side, as shown. To start, have students cover the column of words with a strip of card stock or construction paper so that they can only see the pictures. Follow the steps listed below.

1. STUDENTS FIND THE PICTURES - The students look at the pictures. The teacher looks at a list of the words. The teacher starts with the first word, pronouncing each sound in the word separately, with a slight pause in between each sound. For example: n.....u.....t. Make sure the sounds are completely separate. Don't say nu.....t. Don't say n.....ut. In the examples that are wrong, some of the sounds are still stuck together. The students listen to the sounds and look for a picture that has the same sounds. Call on a student to put the sounds together mentally to form the word, point to the matching picture, and say the word aloud. The student should say the word normally, without separating the sounds. The teacher and students continue in the same way until all of the pictures have been found. Be sure to discuss the meanings of any unfamiliar words. This is an oral blending exercise. A better name for it would be "sticking the sounds together to make a word."
2. STUDENTS FIND THE WORDS - Have students remove the paper strip so that they can see the words. This time the teacher looks at the pictures, starting with the picture on the top left, going down the left side, then going to the top picture on the right and going down that column. For each picture, the teacher will say the individual sounds for each picture, separated by a slight pause, in the same way as in step one. This time students listen to the sounds and look for the word that has the same sounds. Call on a student to point to the word, put the sounds together mentally, and say the word normally, without a break between the sounds. Continue in the same way until all of the words have been done.

3. Have students take turns reading the words, going down the column. Then have the whole group reads the words in unison, going down and back up the column.
4. Optional: The teacher gives a hint or clue about the meaning of each word, one at a time. Students listen carefully, find the word with the same meaning, point to it, and read the word. Examples: Find a word that tells where you take a bath. Tub. Find a word that shows something with a hard shell. Nut. Find a dog that is not particular breed . Mutt.
5. Have students read the words again on their own, drawing a line from each word to the matching picture. Assist as needed.

How To Do Spelling Dictation With The Second Workbook Page

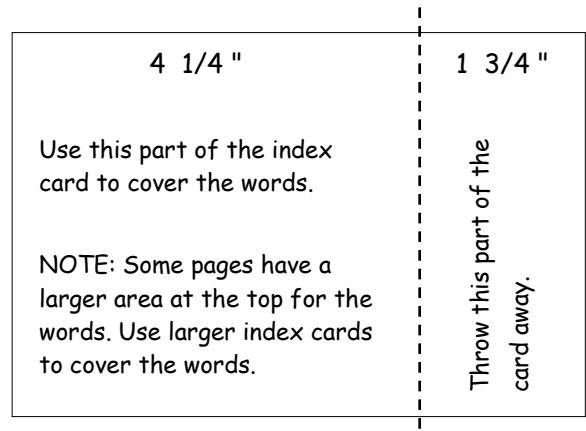

During each day's lesson, the teacher dictates a group of words that all have the same short vowel. By spelling many words with the same short vowel, students learn to put all of the possible beginning and ending consonant sounds with the vowel. Because they are analyzing each word carefully as they spell it, students will find it easier read the words.

The spelling dictation lesson can be done without pictures. However, if you do want to use pictures during the dictation period, you can use the second workbook page for each list. Students will write the words you dictate on a separate sheet of lined paper.

Ahead of time, prepare 4 inch by 6 inch blank index cards to cover the words on the students pages. Cut 1 3/4 inch off of one side of the cards, so that they will be the right size to fit over the words. Make a card for each student. These will be kept and used again with future lessons. When you begin the lesson, pass out the cards and paperclips and show students how to attach the cards to their pages with the clip. Then follow the steps below.

1. The teacher says the sounds for the letters that will be needed to spell the words. Students listen to each sound and repeat it while writing the letter that represents that sound. The teacher should make a list of the letters that will be needed ahead of time. Only the letters that have been taught should be included.
2. The students look at the first picture. The teacher says the word clearly. The teacher and the students segment the word in unison by pronouncing its individual sounds, with a slight pause between each sound. Example: h.....u.....t. Everyone moves their hands in a hopping motion from left to right as they say the sounds, going down as each sound is pronounced. Students then segment (say the separate sounds) again individually. They will write the related letter as they pronounce each sound. (The letter names are not used when spelling phonetic words.)
3. After writing the word, students segment the word again in unison. The teacher writes the letters on lines on the board as they pronounce each sound. Students check their work and correct as needed.
4. Continue in the same way with the rest of the words, following the order in which the pictures appear on the page.
5. After students begin spelling and reading short a words, they will learn a few sight words (A, a, as, has, was) and be ready to begin writing a sentence at the end of each dictation lesson. After the words for all of the pictures have been spelled, dictate any words needed to write the sentence. This can include short vowel words and any sight words that have been taught. It may be necessary to introduce new sight words during this part of the lesson. When you reach the end of the book, you will introduce the suffix _s with verbs and nouns and the suffix 's to show ownership.
6. After the previous steps have been completed, it is time to dictate the sentence. It should contain one or more of the new short vowel words if possible, along with previously taught short vowel words and any of the sight words that have been taught. The sentence should be composed ahead of time and written into the lesson plan. For convenience, you can use a sentence from the Rhyming Short Vowel Words And Sentences book or workbook. All of the words in the sentence should be practiced earlier in the lesson so that students will be able to write them with confidence.
7. Say the sentence slowly and clearly. Students repeat the sentence, in unison, moving their hands in a hopping motion for each word, going from left to right. Then they write each word, one at a time, segmenting the phonetic words aloud.
8. Students can write the words on the workbook page independently at a later time for extra practice.

Note: Irregular sight words can be spelled in two ways.

1. The first way is to spell the words by saying the letter names.
2. The second way is to segment the words as usual by saying the sounds. Students write any sounds that are phonetic. When they come to a non-phonetic part of the word, they say the sound, then write the non-phonetic letters that appear in the word. Provide guidance when students first learn the word and frequently afterwards. Adapt this approach as needed depending on the word. This approach is easier for the students because it matches their familiar spelling routine, reduces dependence on rote memory, and helps them analyze the words. See the examples below.

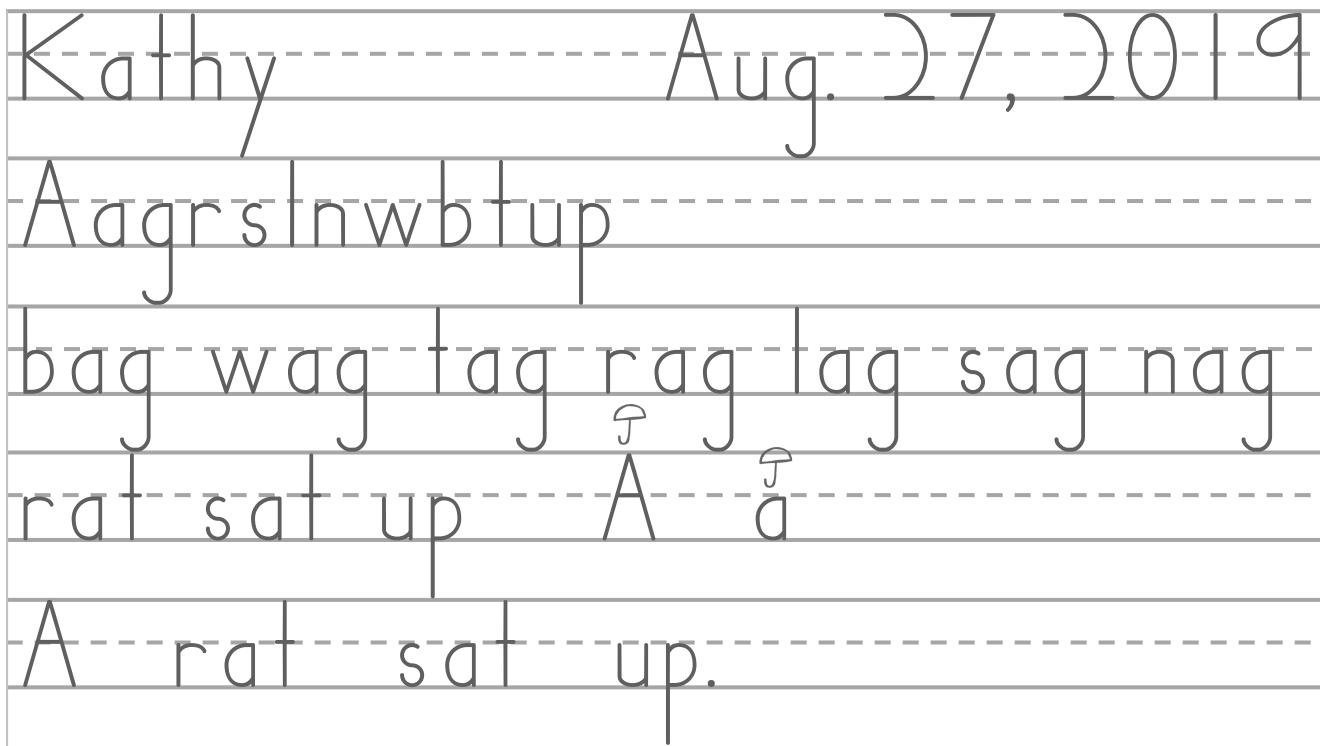

The teacher says the word: is

Students say the sounds : i.....z. They write i when they say the i sound. When they write the z sound, they write s and write a small z above it.

The teacher says the word: a (pronounced "uh")

Students say the sound: u, while writing the letter a. Then they draw a simple umbrella above the letter a. (See the umbrella story in the student books.)
